"What is the number of veterans in this country? I mean, it's gotta be more than a million. There are SO many people in this country that REALLY understand violence and they're not the one's calling for violence. They're not the "punch a Nazi people". The people that really understand violence, that have seen violence, that have committed violence for their country, those are the motherfuckers that you break glass in case of war. You need them and people don't understand that. These people running around, calling for violence, calling for revolution; you are going to open a door that you can never close. And when those soldiers come pouring out of that door to defend what they think is an attack on their freedoms and their country, you're fucked."

Adrenaline kicks in & I'm tailgating you to read it then veering off I-75 and getting speared by a guard rail
